ART FARM IN THE CITY

Little ones flock to this intimate camp for one thing: the resident animals. Once enrolled, kids do a lot more than pet bunnies: They listen to stories, cook healthy meals, learn basic science, and play outside at either Carl Schurz Park or Asphalt Green. Full-day campers take twice-weekly Super Soccer Stars classes, learn karate and go swimming at the Y. Each week's activities center on a theme, such as the circus, rock & roll, or mad science. 419 E 91st St between First and York Aves (212-410-3117, theartfarms.org). Camp runs Jun 28–Aug 20; days and hours per session vary. One-week session $225–$600. Ages 3 to 8.

Despite its name, the Upper East Side Art Farm actually houses only small domestic pets: chinchillas, rabbits, reptiles...you get the idea. But kids who sign up for the camp's farm-themed week will get to schmooze with larger livestock, which visit the facility for a day.
